"'God's Guards' was organized in Quincy, ill. tast February Five men, including myself, were sitting in the back room of a saloon, drinking, when one of our party started up and declared that God was in the room. He told us that we had been chosen by God for a great mission, but that nothing further was revealed. We talked it over and then decided formally to organize.

SHACKLEFORD TALKS FOR THE FARMERS.

Missourian Makes Effective Plea for Wider Distribution of Agricultural Bulletins.

HE CARRIES HIS POINT, TOO.

Flays a Pennsylvania Trust Defender Who Raised the Cry of Populism in Voicing His Opposition.

The Republic Bureau, 14th St. and Pennsylvania Ave Washington, Jan. 28. During the debate on the agricultural appropriation bill to-day. Representative Shackleford of the Eighth Missouri District, made an eloquent appeal for the wider distribution of bulletins to the farmers of the country. The Republicans tried to defeat the proposition, but they were beaten by the Democrate railying in force to the defense of the farmers. Representative Rucker also took a hand in the debate, which for a time was sharp and exciting, and the Missourians acquitted themselves with great credit. They were listened to with close attention nad frequently applauded.

Mr. Shackleford said in part: "It is folly for the Republicans to say that these bulletins are not useful. I know great benefit has been done in my district by the circulation of that literature. I know of one bulletin that has been worth thousands of dollars to my constituents, the bulletin teaching the farmer how to avoid thousands of dollars to my constituents, the bulletin teaching the farmer how to avoid the mildew on grapes. That was sent out by my predecessor—Mr. Bland—into my district. The farmers in my district did not know that any such bulletin was on the face of the earth. It was sent to them and scattered about the whole district.

Resents Cry of Populism.

"I come from a part of the country where our people are as free to express and voice their sentiments as are our streams to run down to the sea. (Applause.) No trust magnate goes out and says to the working people in my district that "The shop will be closed if you do not vote as we dictate." Every man in that region voices his own sentiments, his own wishes, be he Democrat. Republican or a Populist.

"The gentleman from Pennsylvania talks of the farmers. He has a team in his State that he is plowing with, it is Quay and anti-Quay—and I do not know which the gentleman favors. (Applause.)

"The gentleman is able, ardent, eloquent, and he speaks for his constituents, and there can be heard in his words of burning eloquence that we should do something for the down-trodden ship yards in the hands of the Cramps. That gentleman will be always found watchful, able, eloquent and ardent in favor of his great constituency, the trusts; but whenever, forsooth, a man comes from the wide West, where farming is the chief industry, and dares to get up here and say that the farmers have a right to get something from the Government as well as the trusts and the favored classes, the gentleman thrusts his hands in his pockets and says, 'Ah, Populism.' (Applause.)

"Now, if Populism means the favoring of the greatest industry in the land, the

Asked what he considered the greatest source of evil in the politics of the metropolis, Bishop Potter said:

"The Police Department, undoubtedly. As at present governed, the Police Department is a source of evil, instead of a source for good. It is a semimilitary body. It is badly governed. It is under bad general-ship, it is a band of looters and plunderers. Under wise leadership it should be a force for good and the terror of evil doers. It is nothing of the sort. It is rather a help to evil doers.

"The police force should be removed from politics. Look at the London force. It stands for law and order and the dignity appertaining thereto. It is held under the strictest discipline. "Is it possible to suppress crime in a city like New York?" the Hishop was asked.

"It is foolish," he replied, "to suppose that crime can be wholly suppressed in so large a community as this, where there are so many conditions to cope with, but the condition is most awful when the police accept money to permit crime to flourish."

Bishop Potter was asked if he thought Mayor Van Wyck pursued the right course in refusing to half-mast the flag out of respect to Queen Victoria's death.

"I think his position was well taken," Bishop Potter replied, "but the manner in which he expressed himself was in very poor taste. His calling to mind the Boer war was not necessary. Between the lines of his reported remark could be read his bitterness—his revengeful spirit. If he had expressed regret at the dury which precedent compelled him to perform, I think the people generally would think better of him.
He spoke as though it gave him keen satisfaction to have to refuse the request of fair-minded citizens. If he had lowered the flag, however, he might have established a troublesome precedent."

Bishop Potter some time since announced that he must not be considered as a possable successor of Mayor Van Wyck. He said to-day, nowever, that he had in mind
six or seven eminent New Yorkers, any one of whom could unite the reform forces and overthrow the Tammany regime at the next election. But the Bishop was not prepared to name the men, saying it would not be politic to do so at this time.

A person whose stomach and bowels are kept clean and whose liver is lively, and blood pure, is safe against yellow fever, or any other of the dreadful diseases that desolate our beautiful land. Some of the cleanest people outside are filthiest inside, and they are the ones who not only "catch' the infections, but endanger the lives
